Marin Arts Education Plan

The Marin Arts Education Plan was created as a road map for quality arts education for each and every student in Marin County. Research shows that a balanced and comprehensive arts education program engages students to access content, develop a strong personal identity, learn critical thinking skills, express ideas, and apply these skills by synthesizing the world around them.

In 2016 the ArtsEdVision Marin Strategic Working Group was formed to support a county wide arts initiative for equitable arts education. The members represented 18 Marin County organizations and their goal was to develop a visionary plan comprised of strategic goals, objectives and actions with a shared implementation by all partners on behalf of each student in Marin County.

The Marin County Partners include Public Schools, Marin County Office of Education, Marin Community Foundation, Youth in Arts and other community based organizations. Each partner is committed to developing, establishing, and supporting long-term, sustainable arts learning opportunities and sequential programs to meet the needs of each and every student in every school in Marin County.

Understanding the value of the arts being offered to each and every child in Marin serves as a starting point for the Marin Arts Education Plan.

Vision
Each Marin school district is supported in building leadership and instructional capacity to intentionally deliver both discrete and integrated arts instruction, equitably focused on supporting the unique needs of our diverse student population.

"Our future as an innovative country depends on ensuring that everyone has access to the arts and to cultural opportunity...But the intersection of creativity and commerce is about more than economic stimulus; it's also about who we are as people." Michelle Obama
Benefits of Arts Education
Through delivery of a strategic and relevant arts education, students experience greater engagement, joy, interest, and passion, ultimately leading to increased student success.

Extensive research in arts education states:

- Students rise to their greatest creative potential when they experience rigorous intentional instruction in the arts.
- Students become passionate learners with a sense of belonging when they experience success through the arts.
- Students foster curiosity, self-confidence and self-reflection, along with the recognition of capacity to contribute positively to their communities.
- Students increase engagement in their own learning by expressing their unique voice through the arts. The arts address issues of social justice by providing the opportunity to celebrate learners who are often less heard.

Through arts education, students experience:

Critical Thinking & Solution Seeking
Students engage in high-quality thinking to produce, assess, generate and reflect on their own ideas.

Creativity & Innovation
Students create and build upon the ideas of others to allow for new ideas and thoughts to develop. Creativity allows students to elaborate, refine, analyze, and evaluate their approach in an effort to build upon innovative practices.

Communication & Collaboration
Students express their thoughts verbally, in writing, and through an art medium for the purpose of being understood and valued. During this process students demonstrate the ability to effectively and respectfully work with others on tasks that require flexibility and a shared responsibility for meeting the goal.
Sustainability
Collaboratively build a sustainable network of potential funding sources that support equitable arts instruction.

"The obstacles that come with the visual impairment I have melt away when I have a microphone in my hand. I don’t have to worry about not seeing or misreading something like I do in school. In those instances, my creativity knows no bounds. Performing is where I test my boundaries without worrying about my physical limitations. When I create without reservation, when I experiment without apology, I learn about who I am, what I can do, and I feel truly free."

The Marin Arts Education Planning Team

The Arts EdVision Marin Strategic Working Group was established with a goal to develop a visionary plan, inclusive of the vision that every student in the County would receive a quality education with the arts. This original team expanded over the last two years to include a cross-section of the Marin Community; teachers, teaching artists, school administrators, community-based organizations, parents, community members. This team is currently called the Arts Education Planning Team. In tandem, while the team was creating a plan, MCOE, with funding from the Marin Community Foundation, worked with Quadrant researcher Bob Morrison to create a website that established a landscape of arts education programs happening throughout Marin County. This website includes a database of:

- Art disciplines and courses taking place in schools
- Frequency and duration of art instruction
- Provider of art instruction

This data can be found at http://marin.artsedvision.org/. This data will continue to be updated annually, based on funding.

Presently, with continuing support of the funders and the commitment from the community based organizations and the districts, the Marin County Arts Education Plan is designed to be used as a road map for districts as they continue their focus on visual and performing arts education.

The Plan was informed by these contextual factors:

- Marin has 18 school districts serving urban, peri-urban, and rural students.
- The vision for arts learning is evolving.
- There is currently a shortage of Credentialed Arts Specialists statewide.
- Most teacher credentialing programs do not include distinct arts and arts integration courses.
- In California, Marin County has the second highest number of resident artists per capita, second only to Los Angeles.
Thank you to all of the voices who participated and contributed to the creation of the plan from the beginning to the present.
